

Welcome

President John Loftis welcomed all members and their guests to the December potluck meeting.

Lynn Floyd gave the invocation.

Guests

Ian Whitcomb, son of member Jeff Whitcomb of Denton.

Announcements

Steve Jenkins has a mix of scraps 1-2' long and in 4/4, 6/4 and 8/4 thicknesses and a variety of species. Just go by Steve's shop to pick up as much as you want.

John Loftis said he also has offcuts available to be picked up – FREE!

Shop Questions

No shop questions were asked at the potluck.

Show & Tell

Sundar Krishnamoorthy added drawers to his Rockler router table.

Wayne Bower's son made this end grain cutting board from maple and walnut scraps he got from John Loftis.

Jim Polanco responded to a request from a visitor to the club to make repair pieces for a floor damaged by a water leak. Jim cut flooring to length that was too wide and too thick to achieve a perfect match to the existing floor.

Dan Nilus made this egg trunk out of cedar for his daughter. It has a raised panel door and plastic egg racks. The chicken in the picture is just one of her flock.

Larry Maughan turned these goblets from a tree he felled in his yard.

____ Armstrong hand carved this gun stock war club.

Steve Yauch turned these pens for Christmas presents using acrylic blanks in the school colors of those who were receiving them.

of Sapele to display all his memorabilia.

Ron Giordano used plans from Wood Magazine to make these clocks out of bloodwood, maple and walnut.

Bill Bayless was in the Navy for 26 years and made this shadow box out

GT Robinson made several of these serving trays for Christmas presents. He used hand-cut dovetails for the joinery.

Jeff Whitcomb used Inlace resin to inlay this mesquite slab using Waterlok finish. The slab is over 170 years old – he stopped counting at 170. The resin is available online at www.inlaceonline.com.

Jeff also displayed this lamp he turned out of beetle-kill mesquite.

Joe Polich made this pizza peel for his daughter for a Christmas present using scrap pieces of maple and walnut.

The winners of the $10 Show & Tell drawings were Wayne Boyer and Bill Bayless.
